If you contact us by e-mail, we cannot guarantee that any information you provide will be held confidential or privileged. An attorney-client relationship will not be created by sending e-mail to our firm. We will not agree to represent you until after our first consultation with you, completion of a conflict of interest search, and arrangement of a fee agreement with you. If you would like to retain our services, please contact us directly. Internet subscribers and online readers should not act upon this information without seeking professional counsel because each matter has unique factual circumstances.
